PACIFICO DANCE COMPANY

ART FORM: Dance STYLE: Traditional CULTURE: Mexican

MEET THE ARTIST:

Pacifico Dance Company, California's premier Mexican folk-dance company, is a Los Angeles-based ensemble whose works combine traditional styles with modern dance idioms to create dynamic and vibrant choreographies. Artistic director, Adriana Gainey places careful emphasis on Mesoamerican cultures and traditions that have blended European, Latin American, African and Caribbean stylings while preserving history through dance and music. She began her training at a young age at the school of Ballet Folklórico de Mexico under the direction of Amalia Hernandez. She has twice been honored with the Irvine Dance Maker award and has done several collaborations with educational organizations to produce performances for K-12 students. Pacifico captivates audiences and promotes pride in the Latino community through dance, conveying the uniqueness and diversity of the Mexican culture. They have performed extensively throughout the United States including a residency at the Kennedy Center.

ABOUT THE PERFORMANCE:

Spectacularly attired, this performance is filled with exhilarating dancing, music and history from different states in Mexico. It begins with a solo dance accompanied by the musical sounds of a rattle. The audience is given an overview of the dances and the influences of European and African cultures. The next set of dances involve the portrayal of the animals featured in the dances, a bull and iguana. Throughout the performance, attire is modeled and props, such as a fan and handkerchief, are featured so students can appreciate their relevance. Rhythmic footwork, an important part of Mexican dance is introduced as selected students try a few patterns on stage. Next is the suite called "Fiesta en Veracruz," incorporating complex footwork in one dance, and the courtship practice of tying a bow between a couple in another. The next dance is known as a "polka" and is found in the Northern desert state of Chihuahua. This movement style and music resembles that of the Southwest with cowboys on farms. "The Mexican Hat Dance," the national dance of Mexico, follows. The program concludes with "Jalisco," a dance famous for whirling skirts and mariachi music- which is also a tribute to Amalia Hernandez.

PREPARING FOR THE EXPERIENCE:

Mexico, which shares the southern boundary of the United States and extends to Central America, has snowcapped mountains, humid plains, hostile deserts, thick jungles, lush farmland and beautiful coastlines. These geological features have influenced the movements, music and attire of the various regional dances. From the time of the Olmec Indians to the birth of modern Mexico, more than 30 distinct cultures have influenced Mexican civilization, including several European ones. The Aztecs remain the most extensively documented of all Amerindian civilizations at the time of European contact in the 16th century. However, the Mayans were also a great influence in the southern part of Mexico and Central America. It is important to note that dance, music and ritual have been very significant in all of these cultures, but when European cultures mixed with indigenous people, they produced a new group called mestizo (mixed). "Danza de Los Viejitos" originated in the state of Michoacan, perhaps the richest folk art region in all of Mexico. Located in the southwestern part of Mexico, Michoacan takes its name from Nahuatl, an Aztec word meaning "the place of the fishermen." The history of Michoacan is diverse, dominated early on by the powerful Tarascan tribe, also known as Purépecha. The following set of dances, "El Toro Rabon" and "La Iguana" come from the state of Guerero in Western Mexico. This lush tropical area blends the spicy richness of many South American and African cultures with the tranquility and independence of the native coastal people. "Fiesta en Veracruz" (Totonacs) highlights Zapateado, or rhythmic foot patterns, and also "Bamba," the dance where a couple ties a ribbon into a bow using their feet. The state of Veracruz has humid jungles where pre-Hispanic cultures like the Totonacs still survive. The final dances from Jalisco (Mestizo) dances, like "The Mexican Hat Dance," emerged from the ranchero culture and express courtship. At the end of the dance, when the man places his hat on the floor, it shows his love for the woman.

DISCUSSION QUESTIONS:

- What stood out for you in this performance and why?
- Did you see any similarities in the dances you saw performed and the dances you and your friends do? If so, what similarities did you spot? How are they different?
- Describe the that you remember from what the dancers were wearing. Can you name the dance that corresponded to each outfit? What is the region or state?
- Which two dances contrasted the most? In what ways were they different? What cultures influenced each of them?
- What did you learn about the Mexican culture from watching and listening to the performance?
- What most surprised you or interested you about the performance?

FRAMEWORK FOCUS—HISTORY/SOCIAL STUDIES:

Diego Rivera is considered to be one of the most popular and well-known Mexican artists of his time (1886-1957). He painted the Mexican people, their traditions, political conflicts, and the life surrounding them. Diego created an art form that was specifically Mexican, drawing strong, simple, expressive images that were painted with bold strokes and strong colors. As a young man he visited Italy and was greatly impressed by the church murals that showed various scenes, visions and stories. When he returned to Mexico he made murals instead of painting on canvas, for it was a way to share Mexico's history and stories with all of the people.

Go to the library, or online, and research the art of Diego Rivera. Bring pictures of his paintings and murals to share. Select and discuss specific paintings, noting the mood, colors, use of space, shapes and subject matter. What words, images, ideas and feelings does each painting evoke in the students?

Discuss any connections you can see between the dance, music and images. What do they have in common? What is unique about each?

ACTIVITIES TO ENHANCE THE EXPERIENCE:

Cr Select two pieces of Mexican music, one traditional and one more contemporary. Listen to each one; find ways that you would move naturally to each one. Possible choices could include "Jarabe Tapatio" (Mexican Hat Dance) and a mambo by Pérez Prado. You will probably find that the traditional music has a stronger, driving underlying beat, while the mambo is a little freer. You might begin by moving one part of your body, such as shoulders, head, feet, etc. Explore ideas with others. Can you combine a movement that incorporates two body parts (feet and arms, etc.).

Re Analyze two of the dances you saw in the performance and write a paragraph describing each one. Then, see if you can make contrasts and comparisons between them in a third paragraph.

Cn Find a map and locate Mexico. Notice where it is in relation to the United States. Locate the states of Michoacan, Guerrero, Mexico, Veracruz and Jalisco.

Cn Pacífico strives to maintain the integrity of the art form of Mexican folkloric dance, while creating new works that incorporate modern dance. Talk about what it is like to be an American and also to have traditions from another country. How do you combine two cultures? Give examples from your own life or from people you know, or have observed.
