WE TELL STORIES—Feast from the East

ART FORM: Storytelling/Theater

STYLE: Contemporary

CULTURE: Asian, Middle Eastern

MEET THE ARTIST:

We Tell Stories is a diverse storytelling troupe founded by Artistic Director Carl Weintraub. The company has a three-fold purpose: to entertain and educate children through the literature, folklore, and mythology of all times and cultures; to expose them to the processes of language and acting as art forms; and to inspire them to plumb the depths and reach the heights of their own creativity. To this end, the group diligently seeks fresh material and performs it with an extemporaneous flavor, encouraging children to participate in their minds, from their seats and on the stage. In this way, the children see themselves as an integral part of the process, not only witnessing, but also experiencing the stories' morals, the art, and the fun. An old trunk filled with props and costumes is the solitary set, and it is the group's hope that the audiences go away saying to themselves, "I could do that!" And, perhaps they will!

ABOUT THE PERFORMANCE:

"A Feast from the East" is a delectable array of folktales originating from different parts of Asia including the Far East, Middle East and the Pacific Rim. "The Two Stonecutters" from Japan is a story about self-acceptance. A stonecutter who isn't happy with her life wishes for more and more power until she finds that the most powerful thing she can be is herself. The Chinese story "How the Rabbit Got Long Ears" is similar to tales told in other cultures. A farmer uses glutinous (sticky) rice to trap an ornery rabbit. Farm hands and a special scarecrow are among the delightful characters in this tale. This feast of stories also includes "The White Elephant," a story from India. This story features a character named Shankar, who finds the Elephant of Gods grazing in his garden, so he hitches a ride to the heavens and back. When his neighbors find out, and demand to also be taken, the result is a simple story with a great moral - featuring the importance of patience.

PREPARING FOR THE EXPERIENCE:

The purposes and values of storytelling are many.

- Telling a story is a gift - a shared experience that can bring people closer together.
- Storytelling introduces books and hopefully motivates the audience to read and explore literature.
- Storytelling can help teach language skills.
- Through storytelling, the audience can gain insight into motives and patterns of human behavior.
- Storytelling is a way to keep cultural heritage alive.
- Hearing stories gives the listeners practice in visualization, the basis of creative imagination.
- Storytelling brings dramatic joy to the teller and the listener alike.

Characteristics of a good story are:

- a single theme, clearly defined
- a well-developed plot
- style (vivid word pictures, pleasing sounds, rhythm)
- believable characterizations
- faithfulness to source material

A good story for telling is one that, like a good book, has something to say and says it in the best possible way.

Stories help people understand events, people, and relationships through the problems, challenges, choices and actions of different characters. The different points of view of each character can be seen, and perhaps better understood. Stories give us a chance to discuss things in a way that focuses on the lives of the characters, rather than ourselves. A story can shorten an experience or expand it to help us see the many layers of each scenario. We more clearly see the relationship between one's actions and consequences.

DISCUSSION QUESTIONS:

- What did you like about the show? What do you wish could have happened in the show?
- How are you similar or different from a character in the show?
- What character surprised you the most? Which one did you least understand?
- Discuss the moral, or lesson, to be learned from each story.
- Have you been in a similar situation with similar problems as the main character in one of the stories? What did you do to solve your problem? Knowing what you know now, what might you have done differently?
- What is the difference between a live show and a television show?
- In "Cutie Cockroach," Cutie tries to change who she is to be accepted by another creature. Have you ever tried to change your appearance so that someone else might like you more? Share what happened.
- The "White Elephant" is set in India. Find India on a world map. Where is it in relation to North America?
- "How the Rabbit Got Long Ears" is a tale told from China. What other tales do you know from other cultures or countries with a rabbit as one of the main characters? Are the rabbits similar in character or different?

FRAMEWORK FOCUS—LANGUAGE ARTS:

Write a review about the show, critiquing the following:

Plot-What happened in the story? Identify the beginning, middle and end?

Character -Who were the characters? Describe each one.

Motive - What did the characters want? What did they have to do to get what they wanted?

Costumes /Props-What did the characters look like? What costumes did they wear? What objects would they use?

ACTIVITIES TO ENHANCE THE EXPERIENCE:

Re Identify and evaluate the tools that a good storyteller needs. (a good story to tell; clear use of language and a voice that engages the interest of the audience; hand gestures; facial expressions, etc.) Are these the same for actors portraying different characters in a play about the story? What tools might the actors need that are different? (posture and energy that conveys the character; actions such as walking and sitting, as well as posture and gestures that show the mood or feelings; etc.)

Cn By using their bodies, voices, faces, and imaginations, actors pretend to be someone else. Have you ever acted before, or pretended to be something or someone else (an elephant, a rabbit, a roach)? What did you do with your body or voice to create a character?

Cn Sometimes we will find traditional stories, such as "Cinderella" that are told in different cultures with variations. Go to the Music Center's website (<http://www.musiccenter.org/education/Teacher-Resources/Artsource-Curriculum/>). Check under Dance and find the Anna Djanbazian unit that features The Persian Cinderella. There is a unit of study and a lesson to teach.

Cn In this performance by We Tell Stories, there were stories that were from a few different cultures. What things in the "White Elephant," a tale from India, gave you clues about that culture? How about the story from China, "How the Rabbit Got Long Ears?" What clues did you see that helped you to know that it came from China?

Cn Select two stories that were performed. Challenge each other to identify things that were similar and things that were different about each one. Do a Venn diagram (two circles that are side by side with each circle partially overlapping. Write the things that were different, or unique to each story, in the open space of the two circles. Then write similarities in the overlapping space of the two circles. Discuss your choices.

Cn Discuss how a story written down is different from a play format that is written down. (A story is written like in a book, but a play has the setting and characters described. The lines of each of the character are written in the form of a script. Often, a description of each scene is written in the script.)
